INTRODUCTION

KYUSHU UNIVERSITY, GRADUATE SCHOOL OF HUMANITIES

Founded in 1911 as one of Japan's seven imperial universities, Kyushu University has been a longtime leader in education and research. Comprehensive in its academic reach, the university has twelve undergraduate schools, eighteen graduate schools, and numerous affiliated research centers. With the aim of educating global citizens, Kyushu University has developed an increasingly international curriculum.

The Graduate School of Humanities is located on the Ito campus in the center of the Ito peninsula. Overlooking rice fields, mountains, and pristine coastline, the campus boasts a state-of-the-art research library and classroom facilities, a biodiversity conservation zone, dormitories, and a selection of restaurants and cafes. To the east is Fukuoka, a pleasant and cosmopolitan coastal city of one-and-a-half million residents. As the largest city on the subtropical island of Kyushu, it features traditional and modern architecture, historic sites, museums, cultural facilities, and splendid parks—all set against a backdrop of scenic mountains and beautiful seascapes. Moreover, Fukuoka has a well-deserved reputation for fine food and an ecologically balanced lifestyle, such that it frequently appears in top-ten lists of the world's most livable cities. Kyushu has a rich history as a portal to Asia and Europe. With today's burgeoning international trade and convenient international flights, Fukuoka continues to play a pivotal role as one of Japan's important gateways to cultural and economic exchange.

JAPAN STUDIES IN ENGLISH AT THE GRADUATE SCHOOL OF HUMANITIES

THE INTERNATIONAL MASTER'S PROGRAM (IMAP) IN JAPANESE HUMANITIES AND THE INTERNATIONAL DOCTORATE (IDOC) IN JAPANESE HUMANITIES

The IMAP (founded 2011) and IDOC (founded 2017) in Japanese Humanities are the only two graduate programs conducted in English within Kyushu University's Graduate School of Humanities. Both programs are MEXT-certified and each enrolls a select group of international and Japanese students. All students have full access to the educational strengths and facilities of a world-class Japanese university and benefit from the rich array of academic resources it offers.

Both MA and PhD candidates study with specialists in Japanese history, art and architectural history, literature, premodern languages, religions and history of ideas, and other facets of the humanities. Students enroll in rigorous seminars on general and specialist topics, many of which incorporate study at cultural and historical sites within Japan. The IMAP and IDOC in Japanese Humanities are characterized by closely supervised instruction and small seminars customized to meet the long-term academic goals of each student. Seminars taught by primary faculty generally emphasize premodern Japan and its relationship to East Asia; these are supplemented by courses offered by affiliated and guest faculty in topics ranging from Japanese film to archaeology. There are also courses in field-specific methodologies, research methods, and premodern languages (bungo and kanbun). Among other requirements, all IMAP and IDOC students are required to write a thesis in English. Depending on their proficiency in Japanese, MA candidates may select additional courses from the Graduate School of Humanities or other graduate schools within the university; PhD candidates are required to enroll in graduate courses taught in Japanese.

Conferences and lecture series hosting internationally recognized scholars are also part of our programs. Students benefit from the expertise, curricular variety, and network of introductions to the world of Japan studies that these visitors provide.

Lectures and courses frequently include field trips to historic sites, museums, and other cultural activities.

Schweizer with student in Kumano (2018)

PROGRAM FACULTY

ANTON SCHWEIZER

PhD, Heidelberg University

Japanese art and architectural history, cultures of spatial thinking

At the center of Schweizer's research is the employment of artifacts in space, especially site planning and interior decoration in the widest sense as well as depictions of works of architecture in painting, during the late medieval and early modern periods. This focus is accompanied by a strong interest in issues of materiality, manufacturing technologies, and temporality. A second area of interest comprises manifestations of otherness (depictions of Asian, African, and European foreigners; courtesans and samurai), transcultural picture migration, and export art (especially lacquer).

ELLEN VAN GOETHEM

PhD, Ghent University

History, archaeology, religious beliefs and practices of ancient Japan

Van Goethem specializes in the history and archaeology of the Asuka, Nara, and early Heian periods, with a particular focus on the layout of the ancient capitals, and on inscribed wooden tablets (mokkan). She has also published on site divination in premodern East Asia and on the influence of fengshui thought on contemporary Japanese architecture. In her current project, she investigates issues related to the reconstruction of long-lost buildings, the deification of emperors, and the presence of Chinese cosmological symbolism in Shinto shrines. She teaches courses in premodern Japanese history, material culture, and thought.

CALEB CARTER

PhD, University of California, Los Angeles

Japanese religions and Buddhist studies

Carter specializes in the religions of Japan with a focus on religions and religiosity in the mountains. He is an expert on the mountain-based tradition of Shugendō and has also published articles on 'dark' pilgrimage in the Edo period and the contemporary phenomenon of 'power spots' (pawāsupotto). His current research concerns intersections between mountain worship and mountaineering in Japan's modern period as well as 'sacred graffiti' at temples and shrines in the country. Carter's teaching revolves around a variety of issues that include modernity, space and place, narrative and folklore, women and gender, and the natural environment.

YU YANG

PhD, Columbia University

Modern Japanese art and architecture, colonial space and urbanism in East Asia

Yang's research focuses on architecture and urbanism in modern Japan, particularly on the exchange of people, materials, and ideas within the Japanese empire during the first half of the twentieth century. Her current project examines Japanese architectural practice and urban culture in colonial Manchuria (1905–1945). Her broader interests include urban development of modern Japan, colonial modernity, photography and visual culture of the Japanese empire. Yang teaches courses in modern Japanese art and architecture, and spatial configuration of modern East Asia.

DAVID WEISS

PhD, University of Tübingen

Premodern Japanese literatures and languages, history of ideas

Weiss's research focuses on the history of ideas, especially the mythology of ancient Japan and its function in Japan's cultural memory, including its utilization in modern nation building and in justifying colonial rule. More broadly, he is interested in the intercultural transfer of ideas (especially within the Sinosphere) and questions of identity formation (perceptions of self and other). Weiss teaches courses in premodern Japanese literature and global performance theory.

PROSPECTIVE APPLICANTS

IMAP APPLICANTS

Candidates with an undergraduate degree (BA or equivalent) who seek a graduate degree (MA) in one or more subjects within the Japanese humanities, or candidates who already hold an MA but who desire further training to improve their skills, are welcome to apply. Prospective students should possess advanced reading skills in Japanese. The rigorous nature of the IMAP curriculum makes concurrent language classes outside the program unrealistic for most students. Moreover, required courses and electives within IMAP will typically have Japanese readings, while advisors may supervise “directed readings” in Japanese. Courses in bungo and kanbun are regularly taught within the program.

IDOC APPLICANTS

Candidates with a graduate degree (MA or equivalent) within the humanities from an accredited institution are welcome to apply. Japanese language competence (minimum JLPT N2) is essential. Students without a background in bungo or kanbun may take advantage of the program’s regular offering of each. Core and elective courses within the IDOC program use both English and Japanese materials, and students are required to enroll in courses taught in Japanese within the Graduate School of Humanities.

Every year the program also hosts a number of “visiting students” who may join selected seminars and activities. These include exchange students from partner universities (advanced undergraduate and graduate students) as well as non-degree-seeking students (students supported by MEXT and other organizations, or self-funded).

GRADUATES

Since its establishment in 2011, students have come to IMAP from all over the world, including Australia, Bahrain, Belgium, Brazil, China, Italy, Indonesia, Jamaica, Latvia, Lithuania, Mexico, Spain, Slovakia, the UK, the USA, and from within Japan. This diversity of backgrounds and cultures distinguishes IMAP and IDOC. As Japanese students study alongside international students, non-native English speakers hone their skills in academic English writing and reading, while others enhance their Japanese language skills—with all students focused on graduate-level Japanese humanities research. MA recipients might continue their study at the PhD level in Japan or overseas, or secure employment in journalism, public service, teaching and research positions, tourism, and information technology. PhD candidates will typically seek academic or research positions.

PROFILES OF RECENT GRADUATES

Dr. Xiaoyang Hao (PRC, 2014) obtained her PhD from Kyushu University in September 2020.

Lisa Kochinski (USA, 2015) is a PhD candidate in the School of Religion, University of Southern California.

Mason Johnson (USA, 2016) is a doctoral student in the Department of Religious Studies, UC Santa Barbara.

Minori Egashira (Japan, 2017) is a doctoral student in the Department of Art History, University of Chicago.

Budoor Almurbati (Bahrain, 2018) is founder of Chawan, Japanese Tea House in Bahrain and is a Japanese tea and tea culture instructor (ITEI Canada).

Gregory Sattler (Canada, 2019) is a PhD student in the Department of History, UCLA.

THE INTERNATIONAL MASTER'S PROGRAM (IMAP) IN JAPANESE HUMANITIES

The curriculum is structured on a Fall–Spring calendar (October–August). Therefore, IMAP applicants are strongly encouraged to apply for Fall entry.

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

FIRST YEAR
Research, Readings, and Methods
Japanese Humanities Research in Situ (Day excursions + one extended fieldtrip)
Survey courses in Japanese humanities
IMAP Electives

SECOND YEAR
Master's Thesis Guidance
Japanese Humanities Research in Situ (Continued: Day excursions)
Survey courses in Japanese humanities
IMAP Electives

GRADUATION REQUIREMENTS

Each course is assigned 2 credits. Students must earn at least 30 credits to graduate, to be distributed as follows:

- 10 credits in core curriculum courses

- 18 credits in elective courses; at least 6 of these credits must be in courses offered by their primary advisor

- 2 credits for the Master's Thesis Guidance course

Carter with students in the IMAP seminar room (2022)

Yang and students attending a summer festival at Hakozaki Shrine (2018)

IMAP CORE CURRICULUM

Research, Readings, and Methods

In this yearlong seminar, first-year students develop the knowledge and skills needed for research and writing in Japanese humanities through exercises, assignments, response papers to guest lectures, consultations with faculty, and research presentations. Assignments and papers are tailored to the research plan of each course participant. Students will draft a thesis proposal to be polished and submitted by the end of the first year.

Japanese Humanities Research in Situ

This two-year course combines research and fieldwork through regular excursions and one extended trip taken in the first year of the program. Destinations include surrounding Kyushu, Kyoto and Nara, and/or nearby Korea and encompass historical and cultural sites, including burial mounds, castle ruins, pottery kiln towns, early settlements, maritime trade centers, temples, shrines, art exhibitions, and theater performances.

IMAP SURVEY COURSES

One survey course is offered per semester. Completion of at least three is required for graduation.

Japan: A History to 1600

This course examines Japan's premodern past from its origins in prehistory to the late sixteenth century. Students will be introduced to current historiographical trends through recent publications in English and Japanese. Themes of focus include the emergence of the state, the development of the court nobility, and the rise of the warrior class.

Japan: A Literary History

This course surveys the history of Japanese literature, from ancient times through the medieval period. Students will read texts from a variety of genres: narrative tales, poetry and songs, diaries, travel accounts, miscellanies, and plays. Topics of focus include the influence of the classical Chinese canon; the shifting balance between innovation and traditionalism in literary expression; the material and performative aspects of literary practice; and literature's relationship to broader social, political, and religious currents.

Japan: Arts and Visual Cultures

This course examines selected Japanese paintings, crafts, gardens, religious icons, buildings, woodblock prints and other forms of art and visual culture both as art and as object from a variety of viewpoints. Among the perspectives considered are function, artistic expression, material, context, patronage, and the meanings that accrete and change over time and use. Students will also visit collections and special exhibitions in regional museums.

Japan: Religious Traditions

This course takes up key questions in the study of Japanese religions. What are the critical issues scholars have wrestled with in recent decades? What's problematic, understudied, awaiting discovery? Weekly themes include medieval paradigms, the historiography of Shinto, approaches to Shugendō, modern constructions of religion, women and gender, and the discourse and practice of spirituality. Students will debate these issues in the classroom, conduct mini investigations, and seek examples in the field.

MASTER'S THESIS GUIDANCE

A master's thesis is required of all students. During this yearlong seminar, second-year students will encounter advanced methodologies, use additional source materials, and further develop scholarly writing skills. Participants will submit chapter drafts and make regular presentations to faculty and students in order to develop a mutually supportive and productive scholarly cohort through peer review and critique. Qualified students will be encouraged to publish and/or present their work at academic conferences.

IMAP ELECTIVES

Topics in Japanese Art and Architectural History

These courses offer a different focus each time on a selected theme, historical period, recent publication, or special exhibition. The subject is usually determined in tandem with student research plans. Past topics have included “Samurai as Patrons of Art and Architecture,” “Reinventing Japan: Artistic Production in the Momoyama Period,” “Modern Japanese Architecture,” “Drama, Sex, and Poetry: Ukiyo-e prints and paintings,” and classes on museum studies and exhibitions at the Kyushu National Museum.

Topics in Japanese History

These courses provide an in-depth examination of specific aspects of premodern Japanese history. While the main focus is on developments within the Japanese archipelago, the courses also occasionally touch on relevant developments in China and on the Korean peninsula. Topics vary from semester to semester and have included “Cultural Change in Prehistoric Japan,” “State and Authority in Ancient Japan,” as well as “History and Classroom Technology.”

Topics in Japanese Intellectual History

These courses explore themes in the history of ideas such as premodern and modern discourses on collective identity and cultural memory, Confucian learning, National Learning, and the history of scholarship. The courses focus on Japan but also address Japan’s position in the world, including intercultural interactions, images of Japanese culture, and Japanese perceptions of self and other.

Topics in Japanese Literature

These courses explore major narrative genres, forms, and works of Japanese literature, broadly defined. Courses that cover the fundamentals of reading Chinese-style Japanese (kanbun) and classical Japanese (bungo) are regularly offered. The topics of thematic courses are customarily based on students’ research interests.

Topics in Religious Practices and Beliefs

These courses respond to student interests in themes such as pilgrimage, sacred space, popular religion, narrative, gender, and ecology as well textual studies. Recent offerings include “Vernacular Figures in Japanese Religions,” “Translating Japanese Buddhist Texts,” “Place in Japanese Religions,” “Approaches and Methods in the Field,” “Women and Gender in Japanese Religions,” and “Sources in Japanese Religions.”

Topics in Text and Material Culture

These courses aim to familiarize students with the source materials available for the study of ancient Japan, including documents, inscriptions, architecture, landscapes, pottery, and other archaeological finds. Themes will vary on each occasion according to the needs of the course participants.

Topics in Japanese Humanities

These courses vary annually and are generally taught by visiting specialists from institutions in Japan or abroad.

Other

Affiliated faculty in the Faculty of Humanities admit qualified IMAP students to the following occasionally scheduled courses in English: Japanese Archaeology, Japanese Geography, The Ryukyuan Languages: An Introduction, Phonetics and Phonology of Japanese, and History of Islamic Civilization.

Students with advanced Japanese language skills may enroll in courses offered by departments and programs outside of IMAP (including those offered by other graduate schools); however, approval from both the advisor and instructor is necessary in order to fulfill an elective credit requirement.

THE INTERNATIONAL DOCTORATE (IDOC) IN JAPANESE HUMANITIES

IDOC applications are welcomed for both Fall and Spring entry. Applicants are encouraged to contact a potential advisor before the application deadline (contact details can be found on faculty profile pages on the IMAP/IDOC website).

The PhD degree typically takes three to six years to complete. During that time, students enroll in Doctoral Dissertation Guidance and Research and Professional Development, both of which continue for the duration of their enrollment. In addition, students enroll in IDOC elective courses that match their interests. They are also required to enroll in seminars conducted in Japanese by faculty outside of IMAP/IDOC.

GRADUATION REQUIREMENTS

Each course is assigned 2 credits. Students must earn at least 12 credits to graduate, distributed as follows:

- 2 credits for Doctoral Dissertation Guidance
- 2 credits for Research and Professional Development
- 8 credits from IDOC Electives, divided as follows
 - 4 credits from courses offered in English
 - 4 credits from courses offered in Japanese

Student on the Okugake pilgrimage route, Nara Prefecture (extended IMAP field trip, 2022)

IDOC REQUIRED COURSES

Doctoral Dissertation Guidance

This course ensures that the doctoral student is supported throughout the dissertation writing process, including guidance in scholarly, theoretical, and practical concerns. The student should ultimately demonstrate the ability to conduct independent advanced-level scholarly research.

Research and Professional Development

This course enables the incremental and coherent development of research effectiveness, professional and scholarly integrity, publication and grant proposal preparation, and employment strategies. Participation is required each semester.

IDOC ELECTIVES

IDOC electives are tailored to the needs of individual students and cover the following fields: History; Visual Culture and Art History; Literature; Buddhist Studies or Japanese Religions; Text and Material Culture; Intellectual History; and Selected Subjects.

IDOC students are required to take courses in their field(s) of research taught in Japanese by relevant faculty of the Graduate School of Humanities.

APPLICATION PROCESS

Applications are received for either Fall or Spring entry. However, IMAP applicants should note that the curriculum is structured on a Fall-Spring calendar and are therefore strongly encouraged to apply for Fall entry. Spring entry is restricted to students graduating from universities on the Japanese calendar system (April start) or who have other extenuating circumstances. IDOC applications are welcomed for Fall and Spring.

DEADLINE

Fall 2024 entry: All application documents must be received between March 1-15, 2024.

Spring 2025 entry: All application documents must be received between September 2-13, 2024.

ELIGIBILITY

IMAP: Applicants for the IMAP in Japanese Humanities must have received a BA degree (or equivalent) from an accredited institution by the time of enrollment. Students must possess fluency in English (the language used for all courses in the program) and advanced reading skills in Japanese.

IDOC: Applicants for the IDOC in Japanese Humanities must have received an MA degree (or equivalent) in the humanities from an accredited institution by the time of enrollment. Students must be proficient in English and Japanese (minimum JLPT N2 level or proof of equivalent skill).

REQUIRED DOCUMENTS

1. APPLICATION FORM

The application forms for the IMAP and IDOC programs are available on our website: www.imapkyudai.net
Please complete the form electronically (not by hand).

2. RESEARCH PLAN

IMAP

The research plan should be roughly 2000 words in length and should address the following points:

- a. Describe your research plan, including your proposed field of study, research methods, and objectives.
- b. Demonstrate how previous academic experiences have prepared you for this research. Note that this should not take the form of a personal essay and should only constitute a small part of the research plan.
- c. Explain how the program and its faculty are a suitable match for your research interests.
- d. In a final sentence, state whether your statement has been edited or translated by another person and whether any AI or translation software has been used. IMAP students applying for Spring admission should also clearly state their reasons for doing so.

IDOC

The research plan should be within 2500 words (excluding the bibliography) and should address the following points:

- a. Describe your research plan, including your research question or hypothesis, method, objectives, and bibliography.
- b. Demonstrate how the faculty expertise and courses of this program support your research proposal.
- c. Discuss your academic background, including graduate and undergraduate work, and preparedness for the PhD.
- d. In a final sentence, state whether your statement has been edited or translated by another person and whether any AI or translation software has been used.

3. CERTIFICATE OF GRADUATION

Submit a copy of an official graduation certificate or diploma issued by the last university attended. If you have not yet graduated at the time of application, you should include a note of explanation and an estimated date of submission of the certificate. You must present an original copy of the graduate certificate or diploma to the Student Affairs Office upon arrival to campus.

4. ACADEMIC TRANSCRIPTS

Submit copies of official academic transcripts from all universities or equivalent institutions attended. You must present original copies of the academic transcripts to the Student Affairs Office upon arrival to campus.

5. DOCUMENTS ATTESTING TO THE LANGUAGE ABILITIES OF NON-NATIVE SPEAKERS

Non-native speakers of English should submit copies of test results or other relevant documents. These tests should not have been taken more than two years before the time of application. See application form for details.

6. A COPY OF THE PHOTOGRAPH PAGE OF YOUR PASSPORT

7. PROOF OF PAYMENT OF APPLICATION FEE

8. LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

Two letters of recommendation

One recommender must be a faculty member of the university from which you graduated. Visiting research students applying for regular admission to IMAP and IMAP students applying for admission to IDOC are exempt from submitting letters of recommendation.

Recommendation writers should address the length and nature of their relationship with you and your intellectual and emotional maturity as it relates to your ability to perform well in a challenging intellectual and multicultural environment.

Letters should be emailed to the Student Affairs Office directly from the letter writer's work email address. The title of the email should read:

"LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION FOR [your name] for the IMAP/IDOC in Japanese Humanities."

The email address of Student Affairs is jbkkyomu1lt@jimu.kyushu-u.ac.jp.

Applicants will be notified if letters are missing.

DOCUMENT SUBMISSION

All required documents must be submitted in English except for letters of recommendation, which may be written in English or Japanese.

Please use the following link or QR code to the right to register to apply for either program. Upon registration you will receive an email with a link to the online admissions portal.
<https://forms.office.com/r/uApZTGz3y8>

Your questions are welcome and may be emailed to IMAP/IDOC faculty (kokusai@lit.kyushu-u.ac.jp) or to the Student Affairs Division (jbkkyomu1lt@jimu.kyushu-u.ac.jp). Do not send application documents to either email address, except for letters of recommendation (see above).

No changes to application documents will be accepted after submission. Documents and application fees will not be returned. If the application fee is not received, the application will not be processed.

APPLICATION FEE

Applicants must pay a 30,000-yen application fee and include a receipt providing evidence of payment together with the application materials. Only MEXT scholarship students are exempted from paying the application fee; they should enclose a MEXT Scholarship Student Certificate instead. The application fee may be paid online by credit card or at convenience stores.

Online Payment

Payment are accepted with Visa, Master Card, JCB, or American Express credit cards, Union Pay, or Alipay at: <https://e-shiharai.net/english/>

Online payments can be made up to two weeks in advance of the application period. Please refer to the end of this brochure for details about the online payment system. You should select “Kyushu University (graduate schools),” followed by “Graduate School of Humanities.” If the option is not available, you are likely attempting to pay outside the application and payment window.

Convenience Store Payment

For applicants residing in Japan, convenience store payment may be made at 7-Eleven, Lawson, or Family Mart stores. Please refer to the end of this brochure or to <https://e-shiharai.net> (available in Japanese only) for details about convenience store payment.

SELECTION PROCESS

Candidates who advance past the initial stage of document review will be interviewed. Candidates will have the option of being interviewed in person at Kyushu University or via video conferencing in April or May for Fall entry and October or November for Spring entry. Applicants will be notified of the final results by late June for Fall entry and late December for Spring entry.

Faculty and students at the former Matsumoto House, Kitakyushu (2022)

ENROLLMENT AND TUITION FEES

Successful applicants will be requested to complete the enrollment process in early August for Fall entry and early February for Spring entry.

There is a one-time, non-refundable enrollment fee required of all students. Proof of payment of that fee should be submitted along with other entrance procedure documents by the due date unless students have applied for an enrollment fee exemption or deferment, in which case the fee is due upon receipt of the university's deferment decision. If a student withdraws from the university after applying for an enrollment fee exemption or deferment, the student must immediately pay the enrollment fee.

Successful applicants will also be notified of the six-monthly tuition fee. Tuition payments will be made by automatic bank transfer from a Japanese bank account. Withdrawals for the Spring and Fall semesters will be made in late October and late April, respectively. If a student has applied for a tuition fee exemption or reduction, the fee will not be deducted until the deferment results are announced (usually in December and July, respectively).

Fees* for the first year in IMAP and IDOC:

	One-time Enrollment Fee	Tuition Fee	Total
First Semester	282,000	267,900	549,900
Second Semester		267,900	267,900
Total			817,800

*Fees shown are in Japanese yen for the 2023 academic year and may change slightly.

In addition to enrollment fees, IMAP students should anticipate extra costs for the Japanese Humanities Research in Situ course (described on p. 5). Day-trip expenses include food and admission fees. The extended field trip (typically held in the first year of the program) costs approximately 60,000 yen (lodging, transportation, and admission fees) plus meals.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Similar to other Japanese national universities, Kyushu University does not have a comprehensive scholarship system for international students. We strongly recommend that international students take the initiative to apply for any and all relevant support, including the MEXT Scholarship for Research Students, the Ishibashi Foundation Scholarship for art history, the Daiwa Anglo-Japanese Foundation, the Konosuke Matsushita Memorial Foundation Scholarship, and the Rotary Yoneyama Memorial Foundation. Application deadlines and requirements vary and may be before program application deadlines. There are approximately thirty private organizations that provide scholarships for students already enrolled at Kyushu University; most of our current students have received one or more of these. A full list of scholarships with descriptions is available at:

<http://www.isc.kyushu-u.ac.jp/intlweb/scholarship/view/list.php?lang=en>

As it is unlikely that students will be able to cover all expenses solely with scholarship aid, students should have sufficient funds to meet living expenses, rent, and tuition fees. Students are expected to devote most of their time to study. Therefore, outside employment is discouraged and is in any case limited by visa restrictions. Students who demonstrate the ability to balance work and study may be offered the opportunity for part-time paid work as teaching or research assistants.

PRACTICAL INFORMATION

VISA REQUIREMENTS

Prior to arrival, international students must obtain a “College Student” visa through their local Japanese embassy or consulate. The application must be made at the student’s own expense, but Kyushu University will provide the requisite supporting documents. Detailed information will be provided after the selection results are announced.

LIVING AND CURRICULAR EXPENSES

Living expenses vary from individual to individual. The approximate monthly cost of international student life in Fukuoka at a modest but adequate standard is as follows (in Japanese yen):

Accommodation and utilities	30,000 – 60,000
Food	30,000 – 45,000
Miscellaneous (books, supplies, travel, etc.)	20,000 – 40,000
TOTAL	80,000 – 145,000

ACCOMMODATION

Kyushu University has several dormitories available for new students. Applications must be made at the time of enrollment. Dormitory stay is limited to the first semester in residence, during which time students should seek non-campus accommodations for the remainder of the program. A guarantor may be required for renting on the private market; the International Student and Research Support Center can provide assistance.

STUDENT SUPPORT

Kyushu University provides a wide range of support services for international students. The International Student and Researcher Support Center has an office in the Graduate School of Humanities building and assists with translation, document preparation, and other needs. It also provides cross-cultural counseling and information on language courses. For students seeking employment, the Career Services Section is an excellent resource.
